Overview

What is a battery cold plate?

One of the most efficient and cost-effective technologies in the market today is the battery cold plate, specifically designed for direct refrigerant cooling (direct-to-cell cooling). Guchen Industry offers an advanced battery direct cooling plate tailored for Battery Electric Vehicles and Range-Extended Electric Vehicles applications.

What is a battery cooling plate?

Made from high-quality 3003MOD and 6061MOD aluminum alloys, the cold plate offers a superior combination of light weight, corrosion resistance, and mechanical strength. With its lightweight battery module cooling plate design, this solution contributes to overall vehicle energy efficiency while maintaining structural reliability.

What is a Li-ion battery cold plate?

The Li-ion battery cold plate is a cutting-edge thermal management solution that uses direct cooling technology to enhance heat dissipation performance. In this system, the refrigerant comes into direct contact with the battery surface and absorbs heat through a phase change process — evaporating within the cold plate and carrying the heat away.

What is a direct cooling cold plate?

A direct cooling cold plate is a thermal management component that allows direct contact between the refrigerant and the battery cells, enabling rapid heat dissipation. This technology ensures that temperature within the battery pack remains uniform, preventing hot spots and improving the overall performance of the vehicle.
