Norway base station site planning announcement

Overview

Where will Norway's new Air Force base be located?

Two Norwegian sites were evaluated for the new centre: Rygge Air Force Base and Reitan near Bodø in Northern Norway. The Government has now decided to nominate Reitan as the permanent location. "Norway's most important strategic interests lie in the High North."

What is the air operations centre in Norway?

The Air Operations Centre in Norway will be responsible for command and control in the countries and sea areas that belong to NATO's northwestern region. Bodø (High North News): Norway's Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Støre emphasizes the importance of the High North for choosing Bodø as the location for NATO's third combined air operations centre.

Will Norway host NATO's new combined air operations centre?

Photo by: Ole Andreas Vekve - Royal Norwegian Armed Forces. The Norwegian Government has officially proposed Bodø as the site for NATO's new regional Combined Air Operations Centre (CAOC). The announcement follows NATO's earlier acceptance of Norway's offer to host the facility.

Will Norway build a new Air Force base in Bodo?

The site was among two locations proposed by the government, the other being Rygge Air Force Base in Bodo. The selection follows NATO's acceptance earlier in the year of Norway's proposal to build the regional facility in the country.
